of luxury

A UNIQUE ATMOSPHERE greeted me as I stepped across the threshold of this very special hotel. At the heart of Tallinn's beautiful old town, its massive wooden beams, green and plum-coloured decor made me think of my great-uncle Alexander, whose extensive travels were often planned around this historic port-of-call. Steeped in a rustic, baronial atmosphere, the hotel's inner glow and warmth beckoned me irresistibly in...

LIKE A LONG-LOST FRIEND,
the Great Hall and reading-room invited me to sink into the plush arm-chairs in the glow of candles and a crackling log fire.

As if in a tavern,
with a drink at arm's length, this is the place to retire from the world, to settle down thankfully with books, newspapers and travel journal, and reflect on a rich cultural heritage and natural good taste.

EPICUREAN TRADITIONS
are even more faithfully recalled in the beautifully restored vaulted cellars, which I soon discovered to be the main dining-room in this 13th-century building.

Copious breakfasts and imaginative meals are served with grace and flair, accompanied by soft candlelight, gleaming tableware and a rich selection of fine wines and Champagne.
In summer, the courtyard garden provides an equally enchanted alternative.

AFTER A DAY OF DISCOVERY

in the cobbled streets of Tallinn, my room was a haven of warmth, peacefulness and faultless taste. Amidst its luxurious furnishings, enticing bed linen and subdued lighting, I imagined great-uncle Alexander returning from a tour of the Alexander Nevsky Cathedral, the Town-Hall Square and Palace of the Czars, staring in bemused fashion at the direct-dial telephone, color television, modem and fax connections...

AT THE HEART OF
MEDIEVAL TALLINN
sheltered by its towers and sturdy walls, I was again reminded that the past can play a very gracious host to the present.

Within thick stone walls enhanced by paintings and antiques, the hotel's facilities include a boardroom with state-of-the-art equipment, as well as cocktail and banqueting possibilities.

A return to the source, for businessmen and travellers of discerning taste.
